ABSTRACT

This publication is an annotated listing of sources of free learning materials for classroom use, with expanded sections in career education and environmental education. Part 1 is alphabetized by subject so that teachers may quickly find sources of materials pertinent to units they are teaching. In using this topical index, the reader is referred to the page or pages in part 2 which list materials related to a given topic. Part 2 classifies materials according to source, thus making it possible for the reader to note all of the items available gratis from a given organization. Grade levels are indicated for all the materials listed. An appendix is attached which lists additional sources of free materials, including general sources and specific publications. (BD)

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The compilation and evaluation of such a vast amount of materials as represented in this book are never accomplished by one person. I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to the following individuals for their assistance in this endeavor.

1. Becky Buck
2. Laurie Cornish
3. Eldon Finger
4. Kathie Gerot
5. Debi Miller
6. Michele Minard
7. Mandy Olson
8. Sue Schuhmacher
9. Sue Weiban
10. Jacque Willett

Also, I am deeply indebted to Cindy Cummings for her untiring efforts in working to keep the process rolling. Her contributions are evident in all aspects of the finished product.

FOREWORD

TO THE TEACHER

Current materials are finding an increasingly important place in the enrichment of the school curriculum. Teachers are discovering that learning materials available from industry, governmental agencies, and other sources are often more up-to-date, comprehensive in scope, and interest-arousing than corresponding sections of traditional instructional materials. This is not to minimize the importance of the textbook, but as the term "text" implies, the coverage of any given topic must be necessarily limited. Furthermore, a textbook can hardly be expected to be revised and brought up-to-date each year, while pamphlets and similar materials are often of very recent origin.

Teachers and school systems in general should select free current materials with thoughtful care, classify and file them for easy accessibility, and use them with professional skill. With the flood of such current materials now available, it is only too easy to send a number of postal cards asking for "gobs" of materials which have little pertinence to the curriculum of a given class. Be careful not to accept highly propagandistic materials as truth, and fill the classroom vertical file with pamphlets heavily weighted with advertising. However, educators should take advantage of all good sources of learning materials, with each teacher making judgments as to what these materials should be.

In presenting this publication to teachers, we urge their thoughtful consideration in obtaining any of the materials listed herein. Only the material which gives promise of classroom use should be sent for. If the material proves of special value, a thank-you to the organization from which it was obtained will help the officials of that organization to measure the educational value of its publications.

Following is a sample letter which could be used in requesting free materials:

WASHINGTON SCHOOL
115 1st Street, Southwest
New York, New York 10010

January 1, 1975

Swedish Information Service
Eight East 68th Street
New York, New York 10013

Gentlemen:

Our fifth grade social studies class is studying about Sweden. We understand the following complimentary publications are available:

"Digest of Sweden"
"Sweden in Pictures"

We would appreciate receiving these two publications and similar materials you feel might be helpful.

Sincerely,

The following guiding principles will be helpful in writing for the materials:

1. Use school stationery. (See Foreword "To the Teacher" for an example.) Many companies and organizations specifically make this request. Also indicate the reason for requesting the material.

2. Follow the directions carefully with regard to the quantity available. When this is not designated, it is likely that the number available would be at the discretion of the supplier.

3. Quote titles exactly as they are listed. Request the materials several weeks before you plan to use them. To insure the most extensive coverage of any topic, ALWAYS refer to the subject index.

HOW TO USE THIS BOOK

Part I is alphabetized by subject so that teachers may quickly find sources of materials pertinent to units which they are teaching. In using this topical index, the reader is referred to the page or pages on which are listed the materials related to a given topic. The selected materials listed in Part II have been classified according to the source, thus making it possible for the reader to note all of the items available gratis from a given organization. It should also be noted that in Parts I and II the grade levels are indicated, using the following symbols:

P — Primary

I — Intermediate

JH — Junior High

SH — Senior High

T — Teacher

The grade level indicated for the various materials is merely suggestive. A teacher may find that items listed for grade levels other than his own may be especially pertinent for individual pupils.

Each of the items listed in this publication is located in the Free Materials File in the Curriculum Laboratory at the University of Northern Iowa. Visitors to the laboratory are welcome at all times to examine these materials. All users of the publication are invited to write directly to me should they desire more specific information regarding either sources of current materials or other matters discussed herein. Suggestions regarding new sources, not listed here, will also be welcome.
